Fifty-one elementary schools using USDA grant to promote fresh fruits, vegetables

Students in 51 South Carolina public elementary schools will be encouraged to boost their consumption of fresh fruits and vegetables thanks to a federal grant making healthier eating easier during the upcoming school year.

The schools are taking part in the US Department of Agriculture's Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Program. They'll be sharing a $1,172,650 grant from the USDA in partnership with the South Carolina Department of Education (SCDE) and the South Carolina Department of Agriculture.

Funds will go to purchase and serve a wide variety of free fresh fruits and vegetables, providing fruit baskets inside classrooms, kiosks in hallways and other innovative approaches to give youngsters a chance to grab a healthy snack throughout the school day. The aim is to create a healthier school environment.

Schools also will make nutrition education a priority, emphasizing the importance of fresh fruits and vegetables in a healthy diet. The program engages all of the students' senses - sound, sight, touch, smell and, most important, taste.

"There are actually two goals here," said State Superintendent of Education Jim Rex. "First, we want kids to eat more fresh fruits and vegetables. Second - and perhaps even more important in the long run - we want to give them a head start on developing healthier eating habits that can last their whole lives."

The SCDE's Office of School Food Services and Nutrition is partnering with the SC Department of Agriculture to work with local farmers to purchase home-grown fruits and produce for the program.

Hugh E. Weathers
Commissioner

Commissioner's School wraps up another successful year

One of the highlights of the summer at the South Carolina Department of Agriculture, aside from sampling as much as possible of the fresh produce coming out of the fields, is the summer academic program held each year with our partners at Clemson University.

This is the sixth year we've collaborated with Clemson's College of Agriculture, Forestry and Life Sciences putting on the SC Commissioner's School for Agriculture (SCCSA) to encourage high school students to examine agriculture as a career. In fact, each year it has grown stronger as its reputation grows among the former students, teachers and guidance counselors around the state. We've certainly seen the number and quality of applicants increase each year.

Let me just say Commissioner's School is not a "summer camp." It's a busy academic week for the students where they explore career paths in not only agriculture, but forestry, wildlife and natural resources. The program starts on a Saturday and they hit the ground running. Because these students come from varied backgrounds and communities they start right away getting to know one another through team building exercises to break the ice. It doesn't take long before they become friends, and some are 'assigned' nicknames by their buddies for a whole number of reasons.

Copelan serving as interim manager for South Carolina Cattlemen's Association

Roy Copelan with the South Carolina Beef Board was recently named as interim manager for the South Carolina Cattlemen's Association (SCCA) until a part-time executive director is found.

As interim manager, Copelan will be working seven to ten hours each week from the SCCA office in Columbia overseeing memberships, county and regional cattle group visits, SCCA beef industry license plate promotion, and will communicate NCBA policies.

"I was pleased when asked to take on this very important role for our industry and will be working hard for our beef producers until a new manager is found," Copelan said.

The mission of the South Carolina Beef Board and Cattlemen's Association is to advance the economic, political, and social interests of SC's cattle industry and to increase the demand for beef and beef products within the state of South Carolina. Commissioner’s School

The SCCSA is the successful group effort between our agency and Clemson. A number of years ago Dr. Tom Dobbins at Clemson had the idea for the program and they took a good look at what was already taking place at Penn State and Virginia Tech. Both of those programs were well established and great models for us. Since its inception the SCCSA is becoming a robust academic program that introduces high school students to a wide variety of career interests.

Most of the students come from across the state and we even have some from other states. This year the program ran from July 18-24 and we welcomed 33 students in total. Two also came from as far away as Massachusetts and North Carolina.

"We had another great group of students this year and their enthusiasm and eagerness to learn was thrilling," said Katie Black, Coordinator of Student Relations and Recruitment for the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Life Sciences at Clemson.

Katie also serves as director of Commissioner's School and said the students were not only challenged academically, but were tasked with using their creative thinking skills during such events as the Certified SC Grown Smoothie Night.

The students spent the week in hands-on scientific exploration along with workshops related to academic integrity, team work, personal growth and leadership. The students chose academic tracks related to their interests, and they were also exposed to numerous agriculture disciplines such as apiary, athletic turf-grass management during a tour of Death Valley, animal and veterinary sciences, packaging science, biofuels, forestry and wildlife and natural resource management. They also took several field trips including visits to university research farms and the Clemson Experimental Forest.

That's a lot to learn in just one week. But with teenagers, it can't be all work. There's some time for some fun too. The students had a day rafting the Chattooga River, and enjoyed an outdoor movie night with homemade ice cream. By the end of the week new friendships are formed, and careers choices are explored. I always tell the moms and dads who come to pick up their students on Friday they need to ask their questions about the week early in the car ride home because their kids will be asleep before too long.

Our staff and the staff at Clemson put on a fantastic program each year. I love to see these young folks get excited about agriculture. They are the future of our industry here in the state. According to the latest Census of Agriculture the average age of the farmer in South Carolina is 56. My hope is they will stay here in South Carolina, make a career in agribusiness and help move our industry ahead in the new coming decade.

SCCSA is open to rising high school juniors and seniors with a strong interest in the fields of agriculture, forestry or life sciences. Anyone interested in participating in next year's Commissioner's School should contact Katie Black at the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Life Sciences at Clemson. She can be reached at hulse@clemson.edu or 864-656-6662. Or check out their website at <http://www.clemson.edu/cafls/sccsa/>

Tomato Pie

2 cooked and cooled pie shells (freezer kind)	6 to 8 leaves or one bunch chopped fresh basil
4 to 5 tomatoes, peeled	1 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup green onions, diced	1 cup sharp cheddar cheese
1/4 cup chives, diced

Prepare pie crust according to package directions. Let pie crust cool completely. Peel and slice tomatoes. Layer tomatoes in pie crust. Drizzle with small amount of olive oil. (optional) Sprinkle tomatoes with salt and pepper. Then top tomatoes with basil, chives and onions. Mix together cheese an mayonnaise. Spread mixture over top and bake pie at 350-400 degrees for 30 minutes or until cheese has melted and pie has heated completely through.

NOTE: You can eyeball the basil, chives and green onions. Sometimes you can put less chives or more onions depending on who you are serving it to. In other words, it is not crucial to follow the exact directions for this recipe. Make it according to your taste.
